

ists
the
me
the
the
est
her

Dis-
mid-
be

Interest and Sympathy.

It is pleasant to patronize those needing our aid and sympathy, where we can get not only the worth of our money, good work, but aid the worthy. If anything can excite the better and nobler sympathies of our nature, it is to see a woman bereft of her protector, of a husband, and left with fatherless little ones and small means of support, and still determined to avail herself of all honest and worthy resources to support herself and those dependent upon her. Unasked, we have from time to time and cheerfully do so again, called the attention ~~of our friends~~ to the womanly efforts of Mrs. Parsons. Her husband left, as her ~~own~~ dependence, the Gallery above the Post Office. We thank our business men for the kind sympathy, and especially patronage, they have given Mrs. P's Gallery, often sending her patrons. It is right, manly and just. Besides, we should think that a noble and manly sympathy to assist a mother and fatherless children, would inspire a photographer to give a wide berth to a woman thus situated, to give her the entire business, the best possible chance.

Rev. Mr. Uylewilligan.